Ixim Catholic Social Teaching Event

In a time of uncertainty and change in immigration, how are we—as people of faith—called to respond? What guidance does Catholic Social Teaching offer us now? Join Ixim, our archdiocesan mission to Guatemala, for a welcoming evening of listening, reflection, and conversation with Dr. Jennifer Reed-Bouley of the College of Saint Mary, as we discern together how to respond with compassion, justice, and hope. The event will be held in the St. Frances Cabrini Parish Center on Thursday, March 12th. A social time will begin at 6 pm with the presentation to start at 6:30 pm. Dr. Jennifer Reed-Bouley is Professor and Program Director of Theology, as well as Acting Coordinator of Mission Integration, at College of Saint Mary in Omaha, Nebraska. She has taught courses in Catholic social thought and environmental ethics since 1998. One of her recent publications with Bernard Prusak is, Catholic Higher Education and Catholic Social Thought (Paulist, 2023).

Invitation from Catholic Cemeteries

Catholic Cemeteries invites you to pray and walk the Stations of the Cross each Wednesday evening during Lent. They meet in Holy Angels Mausoleum in Resurrection Cemetery at 6 pm. This prayer and walk are a remembrance for those who have travelled this journey before us and are still very much a part of who we are today. This reflection of our respective journeys leads us to the joy of resurrection that awaits each of us. They will have Good Friday Stations of the Cross, April 3rd at 3 pm in Calvary Cemetery.

Pastor's Letter

Dear Friends,

During their Lenten retreat at the Vatican, Pope Leo and the team at the Vatican heard reflections from Bishop Eric Varden. Some of these reflections were specific to the ministry of a bishop or a priest, but many of them provide great insights for all of us. I offer you the seventh reflection that they heard for your own prayerful reflection:

When Jesus spelled out what it means to remain with him, to enter the Kingdom towards which he was pointing, 'many of his disciples drew back and no longer went about with him'. They would not put up with his discourses about sacramental realism, the indissolubility of marriage, the necessity of the Cross. When Christ was crucified on Calvary, the synodos that had walked with him six days before was no more. Two followers only remained: his Mother and John, the Beloved Disciple. John gives a stark account of Jesus's kenosis. It plays out at two levels: that of divine, compassionate love crushed in the winepress of the Cross; and that of the betrayal of human loyalties. Yet John insists that this scene of dereliction manifests Christ's glory.

'Glorification', says St. Bernard, 'happens in the presence of God's face' when, our earthly voyage done, we shall at last behold what in this life we have firmly hoped for, putting our trust in Jesus's name. 'Spes in nomine, res in facie est'. There is no way of rendering this terse formula except by way of turgid circumscription: 'Our hope is in the name of the Lord; the reality hoped for will be revealed face to face.'

Yet a 'hidden glory' is perceptible even now. Augustine liked to say that we carry the image of glory in an 'obscure form'. Once we have passed through this life, the form will reveal itself explicit and 'luminous'. It will be apt to stand before God. Any deformities inflicted by ill-used liberty will be reformed then, so that the form will appear in its intended beauty: as 'forma formosa'.

Augustine, at once so profoundly humane and trenchantly lucid, stresses that the glory of the image can never be lost; it is imprinted on our being. It can, though, be buried under accumulating layers of darkness, which must be removed.

The Church reminds women and men of the glory secretly alive in them. She shows us that present mediocrity and despair, not least my despair at my own persistent failures, need not be final; that God's plan for us is infinitely lovely; and that God, through Christ's Mystical Body, will give us grace and strength, if only we ask.

The Church manifests the radiance of 'hidden glory' in her saints. They stand as proofs that even illness and degradation may be means providence uses to realize a glorious purpose, bestowing strength on the feeble and making them radiant. The Church channels 'hidden glory' in her sacraments. Any Catholic knows what light can break forth in the confessional, in an anointing, at an ordination or a wedding. Most splendid, and in some ways most veiled, is the glory of the Holy Eucharist. What priest, after offering Mass, has not felt what a great musician once said about an instrument in a bright communication of beauty, healing, and truth: 'death would really be no tragedy: [for] the best of that which is at the center of human life has been seen and lived through', his heart on fire with glorious wonder?

Peace,

Fr. Damian
